

Hancock Industries opens new Port Bienville quarters

BY TRACI BONNEY
Hancock Industries celebrated the opening of a new warehouse and workshop Friday with a ribbon-cutting in which the ribbon never was cut. Hancock Industries, which has been operating since 1979 to train the handicapped to work in the community, is moving into a 10,000 square foot building at the Port Bienville Industrial Park. The new building, with a climate-controlled workshop and spacious warehouse, will give the workers at Hancock Industries' almost 6,000 more square feet, including the height from floor to ceiling, to use in their various work projects. Rep. Gene Taylor (D/Miss.) was scheduled to speak at the ceremony, but was unable to attend because of Congressional business in Washington, D.C. However, his representative Bo Gex did attend in Taylor's stead. Gex commended Hancock Industries for its work in training those with handicapping conditions to be productive members of the community work force. He said, "Hancock Industries will never be a Fortune 500 company. The workers at Gulf Coast Mental Health Center who oversee this project will probably never become millionaires.

"But the work they are doing, helping others to help themselves, will mean much more than bringing home a big paycheck."

Gex finished his speech, then the opening ceremony was concluded without the cutting of the shiny green ribbon draped across a doorway.

After the ceremony, several who attended congratulated those involved, especially George Graves, manager of Hancock Industries. Graves, obviously excited at the potential represented by the new building, told several well-wishers, "Isn't this great? This is living! I may sleep here tonight!"

Turning serious for a moment, he said, "I think we can provide a better service for

MAN CHARGED IN CRACK SALE

The Hancock County Metropolitan Narcotics Task Force has arrested three Bay St. Louis men in separate cases, but all three are charged with attempting to sell crack cocaine.

Task Force Director Glen Strong stated that Bruce Albert Robinson, 19, of 150 Sheila Drive in Bay St. Louis, was charged with two counts sale of a controlled substance in connection with the alleged crack sale.

Robinson was arrested on the corner of St. Francis and Sycamore streets in front of the MCM Club at about 6:30 p.m. Friday, Strong added.

Bond for Robinson was set at $10,000 and he was still in the Hancock County Jail Saturday morning.

Two more unconnected arrests were made Saturday afternoon and more were expected before the weekend is over, the task force director said.

He is charged with one count sale of a controlled substance, crack cocaine, and his bond was set at $5,000.

Also arrested at about 2:50 p.m. was Brian Joseph Lanaux, 21, of Apt. 14, Washington St., Bay St. Louis.

Strong said Lanaux was also arrested at his residence and charged with one count sale of a controlled substance, crack cocaine.

His bond was also set at $5,000. Agents Gus Aime and James Varnell are investigating the cases.

County to ask for Moore's help in settling gill net controversy

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has decided to take the controversy over gill nets to the State Attorney General's office.

The board attorney, Gerald Gex, decided to attack the problem from a new angle after hearing a presentation Friday by a Waveland resident, Joe Servat, who said he was concerned that gill nets and trammel nets are depleting the area's natural resources. Each year, the board hears similar presentations about the nets, which have been an area of controversy between the sport fishermen who are against their use because they allegedly take

'Project Aware' inmates visit local Youth Court

BY DENA BISNETTE
On Friday, the youngsters who participate in Hancock County Youth Court's programs for juvenile offenders heard first-hand about what a life in prison is like. "Project Aware", a group of state penitentiary inmates from Parchman, brought to Hancock County three views of what a life in crime will cause.

Although the parents of the young participants were invited to attend, due to the confidentiality requirements of Youth Court, the public was not able to view the program.

The last time "Project Aware" came to Hancock County was about three years ago, when a program was presented at the Bay High gymnasium.

The inmates, who at first identified themselves only by their prison numbers and then only by first names, told the young people in their audience about their lives in crime and how they got started—and how they got caught.

According to Tina Griffin, project coordinator for Minact Inc., the agency which helped bring the program here, "Project Aware" features different inmates at different locations but the stories they tell are all similar in effect.

Many of the juveniles who heard the prison inmates are participants in a Minact basic skills for employment program, "Sentenced to Read", in which juveniles who have committed various types of offenses are ordered by the court to attend tutoring sessions to improve or gain functional reading and math skills.

Hancock County Youth Court Judge Michael Haas Sr. stated that "Sentenced to Read" is "the most successful program we have had in Youth Court in my 25 years on the Youth Court bench."

"Sentenced to Read" has been operating in Hancock County for about a year now, said Griffin, who hopes to see similar success for the program presented Friday.

"Project Aware" is trying to let these kids know crime doesn't pay," Griffin said. "If you do the crime, you are going to pay the time."

"Regardless of whether you're in trouble or not, this presentation is going to make you think twice, particularly when you hear about everyday life in the prison itself."

"By bringing this program here, we're aiming at rehabilitation while these young offenders are still at the stage where they're just starting out in crime."

The program originated in 1979 under the Mississippi Department of Corrections' Offender Services Program, then was turned over to the state's Department of Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation in 1986.

It has since been expanded to include a second program for juvenile probationers. Instead of sending inmates to the youngsters, the juvenile offenders are taken to visit the state penitentiary at Parchman or the Rankin County Correctional Facility.

Griffin first saw one of the traveling "Project Aware" teams about four years ago.

"It made me think. I believe it reached most of the kids there," she said.

Cecilia Beebe, the public relations director for Hancock County Youth Court, agrees.

"A lot of these kids think that they can do anything they want until they become 18, and that the court can't do anything to them just because they're juveniles," Beebe said.

"But they fall into a pattern of crime while they're still young, and that doesn't automatically change when they're 18. They think they can stop, but then they find it's very, very hard."

Friday's program included a

Junior Fishing Rodeo scheduled for April 21

BY TRACI BONNEY
The sixth annual Jr. Fishing Rodeo, sponsored by Quad S Company, is scheduled for Saturday, April 21 at Stennis Space Center.

Frank Hess, chairman of the rodeo, said last year's event drew about 250 youngsters age 1 through 15.

The rodeo will start at 7 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. Registration will take place at the spillway.

In case of rain, the rodeo will be held Sunday, April 22.

Prizes will be given for the largest fish caught in the 1-8 age group and the 9-15 age group. A prize also will be given for the largest fish caught in the rodeo.

The kinds of fish caught in last year's rodeo included perch, catfish, gar, mullet and bass.

Prizes include savings bonds for $100, $75 and $50; rods and reels; and other fishing equipment.

There is no admission fee. Soft drinks and food will be sold.

Hess said, "I want to encourage kids from Bay St. Louis and Waveland to come on out. Parents are welcome, too."

"Bring your fishing gear — any freshwater gear will do — and come have some fun!"

Police chief's pain diagnosed as ulcer

BY TRACI BONNEY
Bay St. Louis Police Chief Robert Lee was diagnosed as having an ulcer and was released Thursday from Memorial Hospital at Gulfport after being admitted March 23.

Lee, who admitted himself to the hospital after experiencing chest pains and difficulty in breathing, said he was relieved that the diagnosis was an ulcer and not a heart condition.

The diagnosis came after Lee spent three days in the hospital's intensive care unit and several more days in the hospital while doctors ran tests to determine the source of Lee's pain.

Lee is resting at his home in Pass Christian, but plans to be on his feet again next week.

"I'll be back at work Monday," he said.

male and two female prisoners who have committed various types of offenses, all of them drug-related.

The three looked like average people, clad in "Project Aware" T-shirts and jeans with wide, light-colored stripes on the sides, as they began the program by telling the young people about their backgrounds.

One inmate, Joy, said she is serving five years on a sale of controlled substance charge. Willie is serving 15 years; his offense involved selling cocaine. Amy was sentenced to 12 years for burglary, but she was a drug addict too.

In opening the program, Amy stated that until the time they went to prison, their lives were not that different from those of the youngsters in the audience.

Joy told of beginning to use drugs at age 14, when she had to cope with the trauma of moving from a rural school to a city school became desperate to make friends. She dropped out in her senior year and, recovering from that, becoming an aerobics instructor with her own television show.

"I was doing great, but I wouldn't leave the drugs alone. And one day I agreed to do a favor for somebody I thought was a friend," she said.

That favor, selling $200 worth of cocaine for the friend, landed her in prison. It also taught her a lot about who her friends were: one turned out to be a narcotics agent.

Amy used drugs and alcohol for a long time before getting caught.

She said she had lied her way out of things like wrecking a car when she was drunk, and friends arranged for her to spend a weekend with them when it was necessary to cover up the fact that she had taken a drug laced with an unknown substance and was unable to move or speak for two days.

Amy told how she stayed high to avoid dealing with family problems yet still managed to graduate from high school and be accepted to nursing school, then obtain her license as a neonatal nurse despite a new addition, speed.

She stole drugs from the hospital where she worked and lost her license when she was caught, sold possessions and stole from her family to get drug money, and was caught for a burglary.

Willie was an athlete and had obtained a college degree. He said he became involved in selling drugs when a friend offered him a chance to make extra money during his wife's pregnancy. He started with marijuana and had worked his way up to selling harder drugs when he made a cocaine sale to a narcotics agent.

While all three of these people have the hope of parole, the other "Project Aware" programs Griffin has seen included people whose offenses ranged from selling drugs to murders that got them sentenced to life in prison.

Like the inmates who appeared Friday, they have achieved trusty status and been specifically screened and trained in order to become part of the "Project Aware" team.

"The stories they tell are all true, and some of them are horrifying," Griffin stated, adding that one of the most impressive parts of the programs she has seen consists of a display of homemade weapons prisoners have used to injure and even kill other inmates.

The weapons are called

"shanks" and those displayed Friday were made from such common items as a dowel removed from a locker and a spoon taken by a prisoner at mealtime.

She added that the program appears to be effective. "Different Youth Courts which have had this program have noted a drop in recidivism among those who have seen the presentation," she said.

Kay Brackin, director of mental retardation services with Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, also was pleased with the new building, and with the progress Hancock Industries has made over the last 11 years.

"I've seen this place go from roasting peanuts and selling arts and crafts to having contracts with Fortune 500 companies," she said.

Workers at Hancock Industries are involved in packaging, shipping, shrink-wrapping, recycling and crab trap production projects, as well as other projects including the manufacture of the "tourist trap" for local gift shops. The "tourist trap" is a miniature folding version of a crab trap.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

It is one hour later than you think if you failed to advance your clocks last night.

Daylight Savings Time is once again upon us and our evenings are longer.

I am sure there will be a large number of persons who will be late for work this week because of the time change.

Some of the most surprised folks I have watched over the years have been those coming to church as a service is over, because they forget to change their clocks.

The big day for the Navy/SSC's Special Olympics will be next Saturday at the test site.

Events get underway at 9:30 a.m. with a big Olympic parade.

There will be some 300 Olympians from Hancock, Harrison, Pearl River and Stone Counties.

Wally Alston, who has been heading up the Special Olympics for many years, reports there is a big need for spectators to cheer on the participants.

There will be such events as a standing long jump, softball throw, frisbee throw, 50-meter and 100-meter runs and even wheelchair races for the athletes.

There will also be a fishing clinic for the athletes.

I have been at the test site for several of the Olympic days and it is really a joy to see the expressions of happiness on the faces of the athletes as they compete in the many events.

Alston said he already has over 375 volunteers who will work as coaches, scorers, timers, starters, escorts, food servers, and even official huggers.

This is a special time each year for the Special Olympians, and you as a family can help by just being there.

Why not take the kids along with a lunch and be a great spectator.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Check your labels—buy American!

Dear Editor:

Foreign products are replacing more and more American goods in every facet of life.

Because that "brand names" even on grocery shelves do not mean the contents were grown or packed in the USA.

Recently, because they didn't have a good flavor, I noticed Del Monte canned peaches are a product of Chile, now that's cheating on growers and canner workers, plus the buying public.

Most other types of canned goods—meat, etc.—are not American—some national brands others private labels, and so on.

What's worse, national brands like Del Monte get a premium price while there's no way to know what chemicals and pesticides foreigners are using—some still spray DDT.

Write and tell USA companies we want USA products, but more important, buy only American. That means jobs and money for our people, it also means safer food.

So watch the labels not only for sodium, cholesterol and fat content, but also where the contents came from.

It's important things like this the activists should be fighting for—our health and prosperity and not concentrating on saving little turtles or great big whales.

They'll survive in spite of us, we may not!

Regards,
Royce P. Kaupp

Q. How did the term "National Guard" first get used as a title for the U.S. militia?

A. The 2nd Battalion, 11th New York Artillery adopted the title "National Guard" in honor of Lafayette's celebrated Garde Nationale during the Revolutionary War. The name was adopted during Lafayette's visit to the U.S. in 1824-25.

KOREAN INTEREST IN AMMO PLANT—U.S. Senator Trent Lott recently invited Acting Ambassador from the Republic of Korea Seung Gon Lee to his Washington office to discuss the possibility of Korean contracts with the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant in Hancock County. Those in photo from left are, Congressman Lott, Ambassador Lee and Dr. Jeong Woo Kil, First Secretary of the Korean Embassy in Washington. Ambassador Lee said he would cable Lott's interest to his government in Seoul. At Lott's request, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has raised the issue of Korean contracts with the Ammunition Plant to the Korean Minister of Defense. Lott has learned that representatives of the Korean Explosives Office are planning to visit the plant on April 17.

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Trent Lott

Will we be better off after the Clean Air Act?

In its zeal to pass Clean Air Amendments the Senate has been talking about establishing strict standards to reduce air pollutants and achieve a cleaner environment.

What the Senate has failed to focus on is far more important than these cold numbers. And that is how these standards will affect real people in terms of their jobs, their futures, and the price they are going to pay for products as a result of these standards.

A study conducted by Carnegie-Mellon University analyzes the jobs at risk and job losses which would result from passage of the Clean Air Act Amendments. It concludes that 200,000 jobs would be lost almost immediately due to plants closing in dozens of states. It says total jobs at risk would exceed two million.

The study calculates 28,000 of those jobs at risk are in Mississippi.

Over 100 industries would be affected. We are talking about jobs at petroleum refineries, paper and pulp mills, chemical companies and in the automobile industry. We are talking about people working in auto body shops, laundries, bakeries, dry cleaners, pesticide production and pharmaceutical production.

The fact is that the $20 to $30 billion cost of this legislation won't be paid by some well-heeled faceless industry or big corporation. Working people and their spouses and their children and their neighbors are going to be asked to bear some very real economic burdens.

At 10 p.m. one night on the Senate floor, I approached one of the bill's managers and asked him about these statistics. He said, "Yes, but we'll be cleaner and safer." I responded that it looked like we'd be unemployed, poorer and hungry.

I have to wonder just how happy people are going to be with clean air and a clean environment if they have to pay the cost with their jobs, their livelihoods and the quality of life in their communities?

I am worried about a mood in this country which seems anti-business, anti-farmer, and anti-fisherman. As reflected in the Clean Air Amendments, it says clean up, no matter what it does to business, industry, jobs and utility rates.

I am concerned about where this mood is taking American working men and women, those people who make us competitive, and the entrepreneurs who have given us our standard of living and the clean air that we have today.

We are telling our farmers they no longer can use the chemicals which produce the food abundance we expect from them. We tell our fishermen that they must attach a device to their nets to protect a turtle, which they are not endangering, and still produce a bumper shrimp supply at a bargain price.

We oppose a title change on federal land which will mean jobs in our area because it might, among other things, endanger a ring-necked snake.

At a time when the rest of the world is rejecting communism and socialism to move to a capitalist form of government and a free market economy, there's a mood in America that would close up shop. That is dangerous.

We want and we need clean air and water. They are essential for our future. However, just being cleaner and safer is not going to make you better off or happy, if you're unemployed.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Early California primary will dilute 'Super Tuesday' momentum

"Super Tuesday" in 1988 didn't turn out nearly as strong as Southern Democrats hoped it would be. Now the South may see the influence of its regional presidential primary in 1992 lost in the awesome shadow of California.

Two weeks ago, the Democratic National Committee agreed to let California Democrats shift their presidential primary from June to the first Tuesday in March 1992.

That means California with its huge bloc of votes will be holding its primary one week before the 1992 Super Tuesday Southern regional primary when Mississippi, along with a still-unknown number of other Dixie states, is slated to pick presidential nominees.

By moving the California primary to a much earlier date, Democrats hope that they will be able to determine the party nominee much sooner. That would give them more time to heal intra-party wounds and concentrate on the main target, namely the Republicans.

Southern Democrats are already concerned that the California primary just a week ahead of their regional primary will dilute the influence of the southwide Super Tuesday presidential primary.

The regional primary was launched in 1988 in hopes it would produce a candidate more acceptable to the South.

While moderate Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee ran well in Mississippi (where he received 34 percent of the vote) and carried five southern and border states, the Rev. Jesse Jackson carried an equal number of states (including Mississippi) and the impact of Super Tuesday in 1988 was largely diffused.

It's a matter of history that the Democrats went on to nominate liberal Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis who was inundated by President Bush in every state in the South.

Even before the shift of the California primary, two Southern states—Arkansas and Virginia—had served notice they were pulling out of Super Tuesday for 1992. Kentucky, as well as the border state of Maryland which was part of the 1988 regional primary, is also threatening to defect.

Mississippi should stay with Super Tuesday in the opinion of state Rep. Charlie Capps of Cleveland, who had been one of the leaders of the Southern Legislative Conference which helped bring the regional primary idea into fruition in 1988.

"The impact of the California primary will be momentous," said Capps, "but in my judgment, Mississippi has nothing to lose continuing with the same system rather than rocking along by ourselves."

Mississippi law had provided for holding presidential preferential primaries but until 1988, state Democrats had traditionally selected delegates to the national convention by precinct caucuses, which, in most instances, were attended by only a handful of people.

Capps said the California primary the first Tuesday in March, 1992 could lessen the out-sized importance of the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary which the Democratic National Committee has permitted to remain in mid and late February.

"It seems to me that whoever wins in California will certainly have to go after the votes in the Super Tuesday states, particularly with Texas and Florida still in it, because that's a tremendous number of votes," Capps declared.

One of the keys of the Southern primary was that it would give candidates a shot at winning one-third of the delegates needed to win the party nomination.

California, the largest state in the nation, with at least 52 electoral votes in the next presidential election, along accounts for one-quarter of the delegates needed for nomination.

Some observers believe the heavy loading of the delegate pile in the first two weeks of March, with the combination of California and Super Tuesday, will further tilt the nominating process toward the candidates with the most money to spend on television advertising.

The day of a low-budget candidate going from one state primary to another and winning the nomination such as Jimmy Carter did in 1976 may be over.

As long as the Jesse Jackson phenomenon continues to hover over the Democratic Party presidential process, many Southern Democrats fear that the full impact of Super Tuesday will never be felt.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi Economic Council

Eliminate government waste before raising state taxes

The Mississippi Legislature has moved into the final month of its 90-day 1990 session, and the problem of balancing the state's budget is still to be resolved.

Here's the problem: To balance the budget, the Legislature must either decrease spending or increase revenues. The answer is not that simple.

Pre-session projections were that the state faced its first $2 billion General Fund budget, and that was before the Governor's BEST education program and needs of the universities and community/junior colleges were considered. And, there are other needs which must be met.

This is a good time to remind Mississippians that only people pay taxes. If there is a tax increase, it will trickle down to the individual taxpayer, whatever the form of the tax.

With this mind, Mississippi's taxpayers will want to encourage legislators to concentrate on the elimination of unnecessary and wasteful expenditures of tax dollars before any additional taxes are imposed.

Census numbers are more valuable than you think.

Census figures help decide how much federal, state and local funding your community is entitled to for things like schools and other essential services.

Census, Daylight Savings Time make April Fools' Day more fun

I don't know how it strikes anybody else, but I find it really amusing that the start of Daylight Savings Time and Census Day 1990 happen to fall on April Fools' Day.

It couldn't be better unless April 1 instead of April 15 were the income tax deadline. People are always playing jokes on the Internal Revenue Service by fibbing about their income. And the IRS has a favorite "revenge" joke, too—it's called a surprise audit.

April Fools' Day can be a good bit of fun anyway, but with these two things it's even better this year.

I think my husband Joe was trying to play an early April Fools' Day joke on me when he tried to convince me last week that the start of Daylight Savings Time was the last Sunday in March.

I just told him to call a certain office that's open at night and has all kinds of information, and when the person on duty there didn't even know, he stopped trying to convince me the time change was in March.

instead of April.

I like April Fools' Day jokes as long as they're harmless. The best one I ever had played on me was years ago, when I was working for a newspaper someone had threatened with a lawsuit. I was new to reporting but wasn't overly concerned because I'd had nothing to do with the story involved in the threat.

I happened to mention it in a letter I wrote to a friend in Hattiesburg right before my birthday, which is in the middle of March.

A couple of weeks later, I got a letter from a Hattiesburg attorney's office. I put it on the car seat before I rushed off to a meeting.

All I could think of during the meeting was that darned letter and what I could possibly say in court if called upon as a witness, because nobody at that newspaper ever told me anything. I had very little knowledge of the legal system then and didn't know the letter couldn't be a subpoena.

When I finally opened the letter, I saw that it was postmarked April 1. It was from my friend in Hattiesburg, who was working for the estate of a deceased attorney and had been given some of his old stationery. She told me how much fun it was to shock people with it.

As for April Fools' Day 1990, my household got the short census form. Because the deadline does happen to be today, I would have been severely tempted to play a joke with my answers had I gotten the long form.

Joe saw that coming, I think. He answered the census and sealed the envelope before I ever got my hands on it. I don't even know what they asked him.

Have you ever read the statistics describing the average American household, with 1.5 incomes, two vehicles and 2.5 children? I would have just had to throw in a .5 somewhere on that census form in honor of April Fools' Day, because what's more ridiculous than a .5 statistic on something that can't exist as a half?

I wouldn't actually lie on a census, but it's fun to think about stretching the interpretations of a few questions.

Maybe I can use a .5 on something like "How many permanent residents live in your home?"

Let's see, it says "residents" and it doesn't say whether that includes only people or pets too. We've got two people, two dogs and a cat. If each pet counts as .5 of a mouth to feed, that's 3.5.

Maybe they're taking a survey about lifestyles. If the government is interested in that, they'll ask about things like the size and worth of the house and maybe about some of its contents. If they ask about television sets, Joe's little four-inch screen couldn't possibly be considered a whole TV, so that's another .5.

My car is 11 years old and a lot of the non-essential parts have died of old age and never been replaced. Let's see, the previous owner pulled the pollution control equipment, the air conditioner is gone, one set of speakers will go when I have time to pull them. It might count as .75 of a car.

I suppose a .5 is like beauty—it exists in the eye of the beholder. And a statistics person like a census worker would probably be just the right kind of a beholder.

Happy April Fools' Day to all you census workers out there and to all of you people who were an hour late for everything today.

Nets

a heavy toll on the fish population and the commercial fishermen who want to use them.

Servat, who is not a fisherman, also complained that some of the people who come to Hancock County to set such nets, particularly in the Clermont Harbor area, are creating a health hazard.

"You can go down there any time and see them living out of old cars, and sometimes they'll add a lean-to or a tent. They're leaving their trash all over the ground," he told the board.

"People don't want to come back here after they see that," he added.

According to Gex, the county health department is probably the appropriate agency to help with the health hazard problem, but he is going to write to Attorney General Mike Moore to find out just what the county may do about gill nets.

Gex said that in past years, Hancock County has attempted to control the nets through local and private legislation. These attempts have not been successful.

Beat One Supervisor Robert Peterson stated that in his two and a half years in office, two ordinances have been passed, but the county has had difficulty getting enforcement.

The county would not be in charge of enforcement even if it did have a current gill net ordinance, he stated.

"That falls under the Bureau of Marine Resources. But if we can pass something under home rule, they can enforce it for us," he said.

Bay St. Louis currently has a provision which forbids gillnetting within 1,500 feet of the shoreline, jetties and piers from May 15 through September 15. Waveland turned the problem over to the county last year, asking the board to enact a ban with a limit of 1,200 feet and dates of April 1 to Oct. 1.

The bureau's limit is 1,200 feet, with special stipulations regarding the barrier islands in the Mississippi Sound and certain bayous and creeks.

Gex has said that the municipalities have home rule, which allows them to do anything not specifically prohibited by statute, and already had it at the time that Bay St. Louis enacted its net ordinance.

Counties, once able to do only what was specifically allowed by statute, were granted home rule under recent legislation.

Whether that new status will allow the county to enact its own gill net ordinance, without legislative action, is the question that Gex wants Moore to answer.

The board meets again at 9 a.m. Monday.

COMMUNITY

THE SEA COAST ECHO—SUNDAY, APRIL 1, 1990-1B

SECTION B

Exchange Club's Family Child Center seeks to heighten awareness of child abuse, neglect

Child abuse is a serious and growing national problem. More than 2 million suspected cases of abuse and neglect are reported each year. Several thousand children die as a result of abuse and neglect annually. Hundreds of thousands of cases are unreported. Locally, 253 suspected child abuse and neglect cases were reported in 1989.

"The first step in preventing child abuse is education, so we make an extra effort to inform the community during Child Abuse Prevention Month in April," says Bridget Logan, executive director of the South Mississippi Exchange Club's Family Child Center.

"Citizens can help prevent child abuse by knowing the warning signs and how to report a suspected case of abuse and/or neglect—it's up to each of us to help stop child abuse," said Logan.

"Through cases such as the highly-publicized Lisa Steinberg death, we have seen the result of people looking the other way when it comes to child abuse.

"We must each do our part to insure that this does not happen in our community. Individuals are not held criminally liable for reporting a suspected child abuse case if the report is made in good faith—meaning without malice," she said.

The Exchange Club Center is one of a network of 52 Exchange Club Centers in 27 states and one in Puerto Rico coordinated by the National Exchange Club Foundation for the Prevention of Child Abuse.

In operation since 1988, the local center uses professionally trained and supervised volunteer parent aides to work with families where abuse has occurred as well as families considered "at risk."

The volunteers visit the families at home to demonstrate proper parenting skills, suggest appropriate discipline techniques and alternate coping methods.

The center is supported by local Exchange Clubs on the Mississippi Gulf Coast area. The National Exchange Club, a service organization of more than 44,000 members, adopted child abuse prevention as a national project in 1979.

A list of warning signs and an explanation of how to report a suspected case of child abuse and/or neglect is available by calling the South Mississippi Exchange Club's Family Child Center at 601 868-8686.

Chatov to be featured at art association event

BY DENA BISNETTE

Artist Marc Chatov of Atlanta will be featured as instructor for an oil painting workshop sponsored by the Gulf Coast Art Association.

The association is inviting Hancock County area artists to participate in the event, which will be April 5-8 at the Handsboro Art Center in Gulfport, a local representative of the organization stated.

MARC CHATOV

Demonstrations will be each evening from 6 p.m. until 9 p.m. Painting sessions will be from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. on April 6, 7 and 8.

Models for the daytime sessions will include Franya Ethridge of Bay St. Louis, John Des Angles and Ed Moore. Kathey Maxie will serve as model for the evening demonstrations.

Chatov, who works primarily in oils, pastels and charcoal, studied under the late James Sitton at Georgia State University and with Albert Handell at the Art Students League in New York.

He studied portraiture with his father, Roman Chatov, and his uncle, Constantin Chatov, both internationally known artists who came to the U.S. because of the Russian Revolution.

Marc Chatov originally planned to be an actor, having been influenced by his paternal grandfather's theatre career and the backstage sketches and costume designs which had launched his father's career as an artist.

However, his studies of religion and philosophy in college led him to take up painting as a full-time vocation when he was 20, and his works are influenced by his readings in mythology.

The artist calls his own approach to art "analytical" and was honored for his work in 1986 when he received the Georgia Governor's Excellence Award. He is currently represented by Lagerquist Gallery in Atlanta; Left Bank Gallery, St. Simon Island; MontCrest Gallery and Gallery 210, Chattanooga, Tenn.; and Portraits South, which covers the southeastern U.S.

The association is a nonprofit organization, but fees are being charged to help defray costs of the event. A $60 fee covers the entire workshop, but those who wish to register for the demonstrations only may do so for $30.

A limited number of participants can be accepted for the painting sessions, but more spaces are available for the demonstrations.

To register, send a check payable to Gulf Coast Art Association to P.O. Box 2057, Bay St. Louis, MS 39521. For more information, call 255-1010.

Plan floral designs for inside and out

By Dr. Milo Burnham

One of the nicest things about having flowers blooming in the garden is that they can be cut and brought into the home for additional enjoyment, shared with friends or used in floral arrangements for church, meetings and other functions.

Many different plants including shrubs, annuals, perennials and bulbs serve as a source of cut flowers. Roses are most likely the best known of all cut flowers, but there are many easy-to-grow flowering annuals and perennials that are ideal for cutting.

A mixed border of roses, annuals and perennials can serve as an attractive flower garden to beautify the home landscape and provide cut flowers for the whole summer.

Flowering annuals and perennials can be started from seeds and transplanted to the garden when the plants are large enough to handle. Seeds of some annuals can be planted directly in the garden where they are to grow and flower. Small plants of annuals and perennials also can be purchased from nurseries and garden centers. Some perennials may be purchased as blooming-size plants.

When developing a border for cut flowers, set the plants in groups of three to five of the same plants per group and scatter groups of the same plants throughout the border. Place the taller growing plants in the back and the shorter plants in the front.

Set groups of annuals next to perennials so that there is still color in that part of the garden when the bloom period of a perennial plant has passed. Flowering annuals that are excellent for cutting include cosmos, statice, zinnias, cockscomb, globe amaranth and Gypsophila.

Among the many flowering perennials are Asclepias tuberosa (butterfly weed), Gypsophila (baby's breath), Achillea (yarrow), Phlox paniculata (garden phlox), Echinacea (coneflower) and Liatris (gayfeather).

When selecting flowering annuals for cutting choose varieties that are tall or of medium height to have a stem several inches long attached to the cut flowers.

Short-stemmed flowers from short or dwarf plants are attractive on the plants but provide limited options for making bouquets and arrangements.

Use dwarf plants in the front part of a flower border for masses of color, but limit their use when you want cut flowers.

Plant cosmos and zinnia seeds directly in the garden where they are to grow. Annuals with small seeds will be more successful when transplanted into the garden as small plants.

Some of the newer varieties of cosmos such as the All America Selection Sunny Red and the fiery Red Versailles have tall plants and strong stems which make them excellent for cutting.

Some of the flowering annuals and perennials—cockscomb, baby's breath, globe amaranth, yarrow and coneflower—last long as fresh, cut flowers and also make excellent dried flowers for permanent arrangements. There are a number of other flowers that also can be dried for use in permanent arrangements.

Not all the flowering annuals and perennials that we'd like to grow perform well in our Mississippi climate. Stocks, snapdragons and delphiniums are just three that provide a real challenge.

in Mississippi Gardens

Delphiniums, one of the true aristocrats of cut flowers are perennial in some parts of the United States but are best handled as a biennial in Mississippi.

Plant the small seeds in late summer, and try to over-winter the plants by planting in a well-drained soil. Winter survivors should bloom in mid to late spring and any success at all makes it worth the effort.

Butterfly weed is a native, flowering milkweed that we see as bright orange, roadside flowers throughout the state in summer.

The executive committee of the Hancock County Republican Women's Club will meet at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 5 at Jay's Restaurant, Choctaw Shopping Center, Waveland.

Riverview Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Riverview Homemakers Club was held at the home of Betty Fields.

There were 11 members present. The meeting was called to order by Margie Welsh, president. The devotional was given by Ethel Breaux.

Breaux also gave the educational notes entitled "Handling Household Cleaning Products with Care."

The program was presented by Cathy Kanady, assistant director of the City-County Library. She spoke on the automation of the library. She asked for volunteers to assist in computerization of the library which is scheduled to begin in April.

Members were asked to take products to be recycled to the plant and contribute money collected to the club for community projects.

The group planned a garage sale for May and a field trip to Ponchatoula in April.

Everyone was reminded to attend the March 28 council meeting which would be a discussion of "Backyard Wildlife."

Blue Jeans Garden Club

The March 15 meeting of the Blue Jeans Garden Club was held at the home of Joyce Hicks in Diamondhead with Mary Danna as co-hostess.

The rainy-day meeting began with Mary Danna reading a poem entitled "The Power of Prayer," written by Elsie Natalie Brady.

President Dot Feaheny led members in an opening prayer for members unable to attend due to illness, also for recently deceased relatives of members.

Among the many matters discussed and voted upon was the unanimous decision to donate a river birch to be planted at the Fitness Trail in the name of the Blue Jeans.

Chairman Joyce Hicks announced a group of the Blue Jeans planned to attend the annual luncheon and boutique at Jourdan River Shores Clubhouse sponsored by Annunciation St. Vincent de Paul Ladies Society on April 4.

Another pet project of the Blue Jeans is the Special Olympics held annually at Stennis Space Center. Members voted unanimously to sponsor two athletes again this year. Several ladies decided to sponsor four more athletes on their own, making a total of six from the Blue Jeans.

Mary Danna, luncheon chairman, gave a detailed report on her findings for the group's annual spring hat show and the club's 42nd birthday party to be held in May.

Winners in the monthly judging of plants and arrangements following the business meeting were Beverly Coogan, potted; Joyce Hicks, horticulture; Gladys Goodloe and Virginia Thomas, cultivated, a tie; and Dot Feaheny and Mayola Rotterham, miniature, another tie.

As is the monthly custom, canned food and donations were collected from members before the meeting for the Hancock County Food Pantry.

The door prize, a lovely potted plant, donated by the hostess, was won by Mayola Rotterham, and the 50/50 winner was Gladys Goodloe.

In closing a most interesting and productive meeting, Dot Feaheny expressed thanks and appreciation to everyone for their continuous support.

LONG BAY

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

I'd find it almost no hardship at all to become a vegetarian these Spring days, when our area supermarkets are filled with fresher than fresh vegetables and oh so colorful, along with mounds of fruit.

Often start out with a mound of fresh vegetables destined for some sort of dish, and find that, with my nibbling and tasting as I prepare the veggies, I sometimes am left with not-quite-enough for the dish I'd intended to fix!

So, I improvise, and then buy more and so it goes! Have you tasted any of the sweet yellow corn offered at the markets at good prices, or the yellow squash and zucchini, for instance? And, artichokes are coming down in price, as well as fresh asparagus—and the shiny bell (green) peppers beckon.

And, then there's broccoli! Now that the great Broccoli Brouhaha is over, and we've all conceded President Bush his inalienable right to dislike and to refuse to eat broccoli now that he's all grown up and head of our country, let's get back to more pressing concerns!

But not, of course, before I have my say as a devotee of broccoli, from raw to steamed swiftly with a bit of butter and seasonings, to more elaborate dishes and combinations.

During the controversy over broccoli, esteemed food guru Julia Child even "got into the act" with her suggestion of a simple olive oil-sauteed broccoli dish (incidentally, a tasty way that I often cook broccoli, along with lemon slices and lemon juice.)

If at this point you gag at the thought of one more broccoli recipe, just skip down the page of this newspaper a bit, but you'll miss a special standby recipe, which even most of the men guests seem to enjoy when it's served at a buffet supper. My family likes it, so do my friends and I, see, there! Here's:

ELEGANT AND EASY BROCCOLI-CHICKEN CASSEROLE

2 cups cubed cooked chicken
2 cups chopped, fresh broccoli (briefly steamed)
1/2 cup chopped onions
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
1 Tbsp. butter
2 cups hot, cooked rice
1 can (10 oz.) cream of mushroom soup, condensed
1/2 cup (2 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese

Simmer the mushrooms and onions with the bit of butter in a large skillet until tender. Stir in the rice, chicken, broccoli and soup. Pour into buttered 1 1/2 quart baking dish, and top with cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or a bit more. (Six servings.)

Note: You may substitute a 10-ounce package of frozen, chopped broccoli for the fresh; but with all those bright bunches of broccoli in the markets, and the Pres. not eating any at all, whyever in the world would you want to?

And, before we leave the broccoli beat, let me call to mind that widely served broccoli appetizer which might even appeal to the chief executive tastebuds, especially if his broccoli loving wife doesn't tell him what's in the concoction. Here's:

MOCK OYSTER DIP

It truly tastes oyster, and may also be used as a "side dish" casserole, or baked in individual shell dishes or other dishes, or spooned into patty shells, or even, as one cook of my acquaintance does, spooned over spaghetti! Here it is:

1 1/2 cups chopped broccoli (or 1 pkg. frozen chopped broccoli)
1/2 cup fresh mushrooms, briefly sauteed and coarsely chopped (or small can, pieces and stems if you must)
1 can cream of mushroom soup, undiluted
1 roll garlic cheese (or Jalapeno cheese)

1 stick margarine or butter
1 large onion, chopped
1 small toes garlic, chopped
Pepper, salt as you wish
Cook the broccoli until soft, breaking all my fresh vegetable rules; in fact, overcook the broccoli. Drain. Melt the butter or margarine and saute the onion and garlic pieces in it until quite limp.

While all this is still hot, melt the cheese, then add the remaining ingredients, mixing well. Serve hot, with corn chips or such, keeping the mixture warm in a chafing dish or other food warmer. (Wonder if the president's favorite pork rinds would go with this?)

I'm not picking fun at the president; I have my food-fancies also, such as adding sprinkles of cayenne pepper or crushed red pepper flakes to this already "hot, hot" combination; but, then, I also like sprinklings of cayenne pepper on homemade vanilla ice cream, an old Creole treat!

All right, that's my last word on broccoli, at least for awhile, and on to these ears of corn coming into our markets. I can't think of anything more tasty to do with fresh corn than to cook it quickly and slather with butter and pepper and gorge away to greedy contentment, can you?

But, if you've not tasted fresh corn fitters or fresh corn chowder or fresh corn pudding, you're in for a taste treat (although canned corn is a good substitute when you can't get your greedy hands on fresh corn.)

With those plump, ever so juicy Louisiana strawberries in good supply on our coast, and with ice cream of various flavors on special at many of our area stores, dessert treats are a lazy cook's dream. It's difficult to improve on fresh strawberries heaped on ice cream (unless, of course, you're in the mood to make up a batch of homemade ice cream—if you do, make it strawberry for me! That is, if you're asking me over.)

The new crop of canteloupes, large and tasty, is in from Mexico; so, why not halve your canteloupes, or even quarter them to make 'em go 'round, seed them and fill with stemmed and halved strawberries, along with seedless green grapes for an easy-tasty dessert?

Boneless chuck roast is featured at area stores just now, along with round and shoulder steaks; and pork quarter loins and meaty pork ribs are also in good supply. And, let's not forget the perennially popular chicken!

Use some of the chicken in the broccoli-chicken recipe, or bake or saute or broil or braise; chicken's delicious any way it's cooked. Oops, I'm running out of space as usual! Till next time!

The long-lasting cut flowers are produced in abundance when the relatively problem-free plants are grown in a well-drained soil in a sunny location. The colors of the cultivated types that can be grown from seeds range from yellow to dark red. Some of the plants may even flower in the first year from seed.

That's the beauty of newspaper advertising.

When you've reached a reader with your message, you've got their attention and their concentration.

Their complete concentration. Nobody ever shined their shoes while they read the news.

Can radio and television advertising make such a claim?

No way.

Too many times those advertising vehicles are little more than background noise.

When people turn to their paper, they turn there with interest. Which means that's where your advertising message needs to be.

With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

Somehow, it came as no surprise at all to me to find out that the strawberry is actually a member of the rose family for, just as roses are stars in the garden, so strawberries are stars at the table in whatever form you choose to serve them.

In America, the Indians introduced the succulent red berry to the early colonists, who found the strawberry growing abundantly in Virginia. Europeans had been cultivating the strawberry ever since the 15th century, give or take a hundred years or more; and the strawberry today is one of the most widely cultivated crops in the world, or so I am told.

And, if you ask my opinion, strawberry shortcake rates far above apple pie as the all-time favorite American dessert! To far too many of us, though, strawberry shortcake is sponge-cake soaked in strawberry juice, with berries and whipped cream or whipped topping to finish it off.

I am quite fond of sponge-cake, but when it comes to strawberry shortcake, I'll take the old-fashioned, time-honored biscuit kind shortcake, which I recall from my earliest days, when the family cook would make it, along with small shortcakes for my brothers and sister and me while she was preparing the piece de resistance for the family table.

She would give us each a thick, lighter than light biscuit, split in half and buttered while still hot, then filled with those juicy strawberries sugared to taste, with lashings of "sweet cream" atop. It didn't spoil our appetites in the least, for the four of us were always ready for our dessert at table!

Mary, our family cook, always made a dough of two cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, a dash of salt, along with four tablespoons of shortening and enough water to make a stiff dough. (Sometimes the mixture's too "doughy" and you have to add more water.)

At any rate, roll it Old South "hoecake" fashion about the size of a cake plate, and approximately a half inch thick. Bake in a hot oven, say 400 degrees, until done—and then, with your largest and sharpest knife (which, of course you've run under the hot water faucet to heat it up a bit) split the "cake" and drizzle butter liberally over each layer, just as you do with biscuits hot from the oven.

Distribute three cups of strawberries, halved or quartered (between tastings as I do, of course, and hope you have enough left for the shortcake) and sugared to your taste, onto the cake.

Bring to the table and serve with thick cream poured atop each serving at the very last minute. Good!
